Course objectives
This course objective is to provide students with different perspectives on contemporary economics. Lectures will be presented by visiting professors from different countries showing regional perspectives on the most important economic problems in the context of the global economy, geo-political considerations, local economic culture, and international influences. The lectures will comprise the on-site and virtual learning components.
Learning outcomes
Course contents
The overall 30h will be delivered by several visiting professors in the mix of online and on-site meetings. The full topic content will be completed by Feb. 28th (subject to confirmation of our guest lecturers). The idea is to present interesting economic problems, so the scope will be broad but the main theme is how the modern economy works, why it works that way, and what can be done to improve it.
